A Brief History

The name Grim's Dyke belongs to the ancient defensive earthwork running for just over 3 miles from Historic Bentley Priory to Pinner Hill.

In 1856 the land was purchased by artist & painter Frederick Goodall who then had to wait 12 years before he could develop the land due to the remainder of the lease currently being held by Charles Blackwell, head of the Crosse & Blackwell family. The architect who was commissioned to build Goodall's house was Norman Shaw. His blend of Gothic & late- Elizabethan style complimented Goodall's ideal of a romantic, mellow brick, old English house. Building on the house started in 1870 & was completed in 1872.

In 1890 the property was purchased by Sir W.S Gilbert. During his 21 years at Grim's Dyke he made many alterations to the house & grounds including excavating the boating lake which was later to take his life. He also wrote many of the famous Gilbert & Sullivan operettas in what is now the library bar.

After the deaths of Sir W.S & Lady Gilbert the house was used as a hospital and then unfortunately ran into a period of decline but was very popular as a film set for various film studios.

In 1970 the property was designated a building of special architectural & historical interest and was converted into a hotel. Today the Grim's Dyke is known as one of the finest examples of Norman Shaw architecture and is a Grade II* listed building.

Film and TV History

Grim's Dyke Hotel has been used as a location for many films and TV shows over the years.

Major films include; The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie starring Maggie Smith, Futtocks End starring Ronnie Barker, Sliding Doors starring Gwyneth Paltrow and most recently One Chance starring James Corden.

TV shows include EastEnders, The Avengers, Dr Who, Got What It Takes and Holby City.

The hotel was also a popular location for Hammer and Thriller films including The Devil Rides Out and Curse of the Crimson Alter.

Please ask at reception for a copy our self-tour Film & TV History guides which will direct you around the house and the grounds detailing the locations of the relevant films and detailing points of interest around the property.
